

Laboratory of human-machine interaction

Research activities within the laboratory allow to perform user testing of the interaction of human factor with machinery and equipment in changing conditions. On the basis of the analysis of the obtained data to propose changes leading to increase the efficiency and safety of the investigated processes. The human-machine interface can be characterized as mutual communication and human-machine interaction. It is a place where technology meets man.

---

Technology for research into the impact of the human factor on management, operation and safety transport systems